You're an effort without success, keep on you're a play that's in recess, keep on you can't follow what they discuss, keep on you're reluctant to cause yourself stress, keep on hold on to, the things that you think that are real you're days are like revolving doors, and you always end up on the outside in unison and rebel like manner you go steady without looking back you're driven into dependency on things you can't control don't change the course just keep on, keep on regards to whom it won't concern smiles for those who won't return patches where there's nothing torn but if it feels right it is they who are wrong there's something stale in your life but you're not quite sure what it is a recollected fear, a paralysing thought of just what it means and what it could and they would talk behind your back it never turns out to be true, never changes my mind about you just keep on, keep on, to make sense or just confuse you confuse
