dimensions of intervention are needless so I think striving and thriving I see I'm driving to the brink avoiding annoying eternal complications destinations unimportant constantly distorting my relations from patience to thoughts of hating anyone in my mind I find it hard to believe you can relate to my kind and if I could I would pretend that I'm alright by myself
If you love me as I am I'll put my pride on the shelf if I can I'll pretend I'm alright all by myself I'd rather drown than take your hand
it's the way I am

skepticism leaves a wrinkle on my brow cynicism prevents my change with this suspicion I'm caught in a dilemma intervention with my psyche? rearrange walls built to hinder the intrusion preservation of my mental well being doubt makes me value the safety of my distance can it be stubbornness to which I cling?

and if I climb a wall of pride swim across my sea of doubt will you love me as I am the way I am
