the heart is an ocean a deep blue sea words like a river they flow through me in a chorus of angels a clutch of snakes a dead end desire where my heart aches i turn the engine off the desert feels as empty as my heart and cold as steel it echoes in the night the voices make me wish i couldn't feel hideaway from everyone if you hideaway i'll run to catch you search for something sacred in the prime of my decay if heaven is for real i wish you'd send me on my way cause life it holds no mystery without you by my side careless sighs watch them turn into goodbyes as soft as a whisper and close to me i'm blinded by reason and jealousy will you follow the footsteps that carry you home to a note on the dresser says you're all alone on your own i turn this car around a part of me must heed the sirens call so carelessly to a stranger in my bed she turns her head and cries herself to sleep
my only love my only love she's gone gone away my only love
