Jittering invasion
Desire accommodation
A day in the life collection
We check up, we run away
The problems we all live with
To pursue your tragic myth
My receptive attention
Clears away and I'm content

We merely breathe
We barely feel
We keep ourselves inside our shells
We need to modify this repetitious theme
We merely choke
We barely bleed
We spread the word that we're diseased
Into the love and not this gruesome scheme

We merely breathe
We barely feel
We keep ourselves inside our shells
Oh yes, and it sounds awful when we scream
We merely choke
We barely bleed
We spread the word that we're diseased
We destroyed it and now we're baffled by these things

Oh, don't tell me your must be the infamous girl of my dreams
And how I've heard so much about you to keep it safe and not
I know that you've been here before to make me feel alone

And she warned me
Shrugging her shoulders
Looking into my eyes
Oh what a beautiful disguise

We merely breathe
We barely feel

We keep ourselves inside our shells
And I forgot what I'm even after
We merely choke
We barely bleed
We spread the word that we're diseased
Searching in these wrong places for answers

We merely breathe
We barely feel
We keep ourselves inside our shells
We give up on ourselves before disaster
We merely choke
We barely bleed
We spread the word that we're diseased
The more we fall the more that we grow faster

So now we're puzzled with solutions
Cause we broke down all the answers
And now we're stranded and left alone
So what's there left to live for Cause there's nothing to believe in
Not even you

Soldier boy what's your status
I want out of this blood bath sir
My angst is elevating
To an understanding so bizarre
Miscalculating coordination
We bomb ourselves
Hoping to find faith in honor
We arm ourselves

The last words you said to me
So utterly a mess
Trying to translate
What you mean
