Why do I do what I do? Why do I feel like a fool? Will it
ever be cool?

Why is it that it isn't what it was?

Will I ever be satisfied singing Zippedee-doo-dah?

Why do I do what I do? Why do I feel like a fool? Will it ever be cool?

Every day, same old thing, same routine waking up between

One and two pm with cloudy thoughts and fully clothed.
Smelling like the night before. The rut I'm in has become a bore.

Eyes bloodshot and my head is pounding. Don't ask me, I don't know.

Man, all I know is I can't find my cell,
I woke up on the couch with a Taco Bell
Crunch Wrap Supreme smashed all in the cushions
Feeling like my teeth need a good pressure washing.
The television on mute, another Extenze
Commercial. Left my car windows down again
And it's raining. Just no use to complain,
That's par for the course, just more of the same.

Why do I do what I do? Why do I feel like a fool? Will it ever be cool?

Why is it that it isn't what it was?

Will I ever be satisfied singing Zippadee-doo-dah?

Take a shower, clean myself up. Drink my coffee and beat myself up.
Shake it off and try to salvage the rest of the day.
Hit a drive-thru looking for the, 99cent menu. Of course the Cashier just might be feeling the same way.

Yup, I got about 3 friends that owe me at least 10 bucks
A piece and I'm scaping up change to eat. My windshields cracked
From a fight with my sweetie.
A dash full of trash so I can't find the speeding
Ticket that I got last month, I think,
Or was it before that, I'm up that creek.
And it's raining. Just no use to complain.
That's par for the course, just more of the same.

Why do I do what I do? Why do I feel like a fool? Will it
ever be cool?
Why is it that it isn't what it was?

One day I'll get it together. At least I sure hope I do.
I know my momma worries 'bout me. I know my father,
he does too.

And time keeps ticking away and I'm in the same old place.
I'm sure you can tell by the look on my face that somethings gotta change.
