"Little Dawn"

Well Little Dawn walks on,
and she thinks she don't belong under the starry heights
So take a sigh as long as the war's been going on in your heart tonight
And if you want to make that light, go on and swim across the ocean
And if you want to make it right, go on and put your plan in motion
The gap is only as wide as the hollow of the sky between you, my dear
And the truth, absolute, adding naught more profound to it than that you are here
And if you want to keep it bright, well you might have to burn a candle
And if you want to keep it tight, well you might have to learn to handle
But on the days and nights its hard to breathe and you can't believe you still walk the streets Stretch out your weary hand to me - it's alright
And if you're not content to just believe And if you don't consent to just let it be Stretch out your legs and dance with me all night, tonight
It's alright (repeat)
