You're an angel, sleeping
I give you my life for the joy you bring
Bewildering love
The fruit of my wife you're my endless spring
You'll crawl, and walk
And if you fall and fall then pretty soon you'll talk
And you'll love, and you'll laugh
When life gets you down I'll teach you to react
So you can smile back
Where I come from, it's known
There's nothing you love more than what you've grown
When you're smiling, I cry
So many words come from my eyes
You'll brush, and floss
You better roll the stone before it gathers moss
And we'll catch and toss
And then you'll leave this home and then I will be lost
I will be lost.
