And you would cause the sun to see your light and then be shamed

You cover darkness with a thousand secret flames with your love

Oh my love, oh my love, my love

And I would cause the winds to blow a hundred different days

And bring the perfumes of the gardens of the ways of
your love

Oh my love, oh my love, my love

Crystal and the clay, nights and the day, all on the prince's seal

Eagle of the sky, lion of the earth

This is what the seal is worth, what the seal is worth

Holds all of the dreams of a man

Tapestries wishes of man, pictures and visions of man

The spirit, the soul of the man

And he would vow to love her

For the rest of all his days
