They lived their lives
peacefully
normal humans just like you and me we came along
we stole their land
we told them shut your eyes and hold my hand we showed them things they'd never seen made up stories that would make them dream
we changed their lives
said we would save them from their misery but made them slaves
four hundred years of fighting
gone to waste
give them a little land to keep them away
four hundred years of fighting
don't wonder why their anger keeps on building up today we hypnotized them easily with guns and money
and hypocrisy
they tried to fight
it was too late
they were caught
they took the bait
when we came that day
we brought our whole new ways
a new religion
a way of living
we pushed their culture away
