A short, inconspicuous moment
It appears to be completely irrelevant
Accidentaly their insecure looks cross
Bashfully they sink their eyes to the ground
Their paths went seperate ways
Slowly she's moving away from him
At a moment's notice she'll be dissapeared from his sight
Their two lives go on in a habitual way
Day and Night they awaken and go to sleep
The same place, only time passed Consciously their unconfident looks cross the eyes seem suprisedly familiar Tentatively and quietly he whispers in her ear
Softly and unpurposely he touches her tender skin
Slowly and insecurely she grabs for his hand Gently he strokes over her long hair he senses her fragileness
His lips tender and warm on hers
Lying arm in arm, she's so close to him
Words aren't necessary anymore

His hand touches hers,

He feels her breath

There's no way back
