I dream way too big for this world
Way too big for my fellow man
Am I good enough to guide the future?
I'm starting to think that I can

My only wish is to turn back time
I'd love to have a few more years
And avoid those who weren't brave enough
To venture beyond their fears

Send someone just like me
So we can carry on
We'll have twice the power and double the strength
When the dead weight is gone!

Not so far from here the road splits in two
It's where the common hordes head west
Thousands of lumbering creatures march
To their predictable deaths

If only they knew their real purpose in life!
... well, it's too late for them now
They fade away like they were never here
Forgotten in their final hours!
