There's nothing left to give There's nothing left to prove
There's nothing we can say

We've counted every word
Like stars and all the moons
We've buried them away
As I promised I would

After the rain soaks through your bones
We carry the guilt, we carry our own
After the pain, careless and cold
We carry the life that you'll never know

You cursed at all the world
And wished you never could
You cherished everything
(That'll help us now)

You locked yourself into a room
And silenced the pain in your head

After the rain soaks through your bones
We carry the guilt, we carry our own
After the pain, careless and cold
We carry the life that you'll never know, know

You couldn't cope, you cut it off
And left us all
(And left us all)
I still feel the warmth you left
But now all your color has faded away

After the rain soaks through your bones
We carry the guilt, we carry our own
After the pain, careless and cold
We carry the life that you'll never know

That you'll never know
That you'll never know
That you'll never know
