Here's another day, she waits and pulls herself away
At just the right moment to save her face
I watch the time go ticking down, the waters falling on the ground
I catch myself and try to speak with grace You needed just enough anger, to get you through the door
And you got just enough honesty, to make you want a little more

--chorus--

I wish for nothing but the rain, to fall and wash away Everything that I've done wrong, find a way to make you strong
If only for another day

When I'm all alone, just me and my ghosts Standing three deep, just like sentries at their post They make sure I remember, just a little more than most They make sure that I understand the consequence of past

You needed just enough anger, to get you through the
door
And you got just enough honesty, to make you want a
little more

I wish for nothing but the rain, to fall and wash away Everything that I've done wrong, find a way to make
you strong

When you see me chasing daydreams and you know that I'm not there, I'm not the one who sits across from you, who, returns your stare
And I watch as you grow quiet like you always did
And I wait to get what I deserve
It's the part that doesn't die that makes it hurt...

Here's another day, she waits and pulls herself away

I watch the time go ticking down, the waters falling on
the ground
I catch myself and try to speak with grace

I wish for nothing but the rain, to fall and wash away
Everything that I've done wrong, find a way to make
you strong
If only for another day

If only for another day
