she loves everybody she loves everyone like the picture taken twenty years ago that she keeps in her portfolio

he wants everybody he wants anything and they part the rope outside the whiskey bar a glitter gown in orbit left to satellite a waning star i touch down in the heated land and shiver in my bones as i look up to greet the clouds that wait for me washed aside by circumstance the watercloth had cleared the answer in my mind and you were there with me, there with me again

the evidence sits in the vcr he's choking on apologies, she's channeling a superstar

i tiny elbow through the crowd flashing lights, the music's loud, i'm questioning if this is destiny

disappearing from the rants ignoring risen sycophants, i close my eyes and you were there with me, there with me, there with me again

she loves everybody she loves everyone
