There's nothing left to give There's nothing left to prove
There's nothing we can say
We've counted every word
Like stars and all the moons
We've buried them away
As I promised I would
After the rain soaks through your bones
We carry the guilt, we carry our own
After the pain, careless and cold
We carry the life that you'll never know
You cursed at all the world
And wished you never could
You cherished everything (that'll help us now)
You locked yourself into a room
And silenced the pain in your head
You couldn't cope you cut it off
And left us all
I still see the warmth you left
But now all your color has faded away
