Nobody Knows Me
(Richard Barone & Mark Johnson)

Lonely sidewalks that lead nowhere Lonely footsteps up the stairs Lonely eyes that look right through the lonely lights of the avenue

Nobody knows me-
knows the way I feel Nobody sees that I'm even here.

My watch is clicking keeping time empty verses that never rhyme Lonely eyes behind a screen
A stranger's face I've never seen

Nobody knows me-
knows the way I feel Nobody seems I'm
even here.

You walk past my window-
what do you see?
It's all a reflection
when you're looking at me.

And if my life's an open book,
I've lost myself among the pages
And out the window at five a.m.
I watch the snow in all its stages and if I've lingered for too long in a time when it's all too clear that nobody knows me.

Nobody knows me-
knows the way I feel Nobody seems I'm
even here.

You walk past my window-
what do you see?
It's all a reflection
when you're looking at me.

Nobody knows me-
Nobody knows.
