Within These Walls
(Richard Barone & George Usher)

I'm beginning at the end there's a story I must tell and not pretend I've seen a writing on the wall I must defend and who stands tall beside me may not be my friend-

I've seen it all or enough to know, how the mornings come and go...

When the wind and rain collide there's a story I find hard to keep inside I've seen the oceans parting in the name of pride while some were marching others ran away to hide-

I've seen it all or enough to know, how the evenings come and go

Within these walls
within these walls.

The ringing of the bells there's a story everything in nature tells I've watched as lovers make a hundred long farewells breaking hearts and leaving unrequited spells and still I find that I'm beginning at the end there's a story I must tell and not pretend-

I've seen it all or enough to know, how the seasons come and go

Within these walls
within these walls-
we can be anything at all, we can be anything...
within these walls.
