"How I Spent My Summer"

I drove away from our last goodbye
And settled down in a sleepy town beside the sea.
I'd start to write, but every time I tried
I'd begin to cry for all that couldn't be.

My June was slow, kinda easy going
My July went flashing by like lightning in the night.
And all the while, I was followed by your smile
wondering every lonely night if you're alright.

And my summer started running down, running out
And I wondered why and what it was we fought about.

'Bout then, I'd say, I saw the light of day
And I tried to find my way . . . back home

Had to find my way back home . . .
