Bright, my little bluesboy
you smile too much
let's see a nice frown
don't touch so much

he made it look fun
what's done is done
I am so stupid
you are so young and still i'd have to say that now and then i'd cry to see your smile still I have no reason I have no rhyme

i'm out of your time
you're out of town
a difference not in years but in the distance from a place that I look through you cried for me twice and I have hope, but not enough, no not enough no not so little that i'd dare to tie the rope

she lied for you twice
she doesn't like me
I understand but
she isn't nice

and I sat by the window
you wrote a story
you think i'm evil
I hope you're wrong
and still i felt a spark when it's implied that I had been a good thing once

i'm still dumb
but you're still young, but not enough, no not enough no not so old that you could realize what you've done
