"Walls"

Sometimes life is a question, you don't want to ask Sorting through the lonely broken pieces of your past
When you can't find a reason, the will or the way Every second here another breath you know you have to take The answer's there hiding in the lies, it's gonna be alright

When the walls fall down and you find the truth Shadows run for cover, light comes shining through Every chance you take could be your saving grace
There's a calm inside your soul that's only found
When the walls fall down

Don't know where you're going but you see the other side
You're hearts feeling something that you almost recognize Yesterday's gone, tomorrow's in the wind
Here and now you know it's where you're second chance begins
You don't ask why, there's hope in your eyes You're ready to try

Tears on your face say what you can't say
What you believe can set you free
