[Verse 1]

They say the odds against me, are crooked and impossible
Like I was born with a hole in my heart is an obstacle
I was left to die by the doctors, in the Children's Hospital
But I never lose hope, success is psychological
The world is volatile and the street is my education Shaping the nation, like the blueprint of a mason
While Shawshank record deals get you raped on occasion
So I'm focused on my economic situation
I'm like the little kids on TV that dig through the trash
I hustle regardless of the way you talk shit and laugh
A lot of niggaz drop science but they dont know the math
Because their mind is narrower than the righteous path
It's funny how on the block niggaz will kill you for cash
But never raise the gun and cry out "Freedom at last"
The cold war is over but the world is still gettin colder Atlas walking through the projects with the hood on my shoulders
I would like to raise my children to grow to be soldiers
But then the general, would decide when their life would be over
So I work hard until my personality split Like the black panthers, into the bloods and the crips
They said I would never be shit, but now I sit and reminice Like Yeshua ben Yusef flippin through Genesis Ignorance is venemous, and it murders the soul
Spreading like a virus running rampant, but out of control

[Hook]

So if I should ever fall and get caught in a hustle
Let them know that I died while I fought in a struggle
From the hoodrats to the rich kids lost in a bubble Spray painting on the streets and at the subway tunnels Write it down and remember that we never gave in The mind of a child is where the revolution begins

So if the solution has never been to look in yourself
How is it that you expect to find it anywhere else

[Verse 2]

Immortal Technique in the streets, back on the hustle cause three strikes will get you life for stuffin cracks in a duffle

Upstate behind steel gates intact in the scuffle Razor blades stuck on the side of pencils, hacked to your muscle

But the emptiness is what bleeds you to death when it cuts you

And its the lawyers, not the inmates scheming to fuck you

Trying to fight the system from inside, eventually corrupts you

But thats what you get when you put a corporation above you

And it's the people that love you that seem to hurt you the most

Sometimes when they die you find yourself cursing their ghost

But you make success, nobody delivers your fate

Sometimes you give and you take

Since prehistoric vertebrates, crawled out of the lakes

And thats the truth about life

Or to do it to ghetto and your car, rims, and your ice

Because even though we survived through the struggle that made us

We still look at ourselves through the eyes of people that hate us

But I'm going to make it regardless of the trumped up charges

And semi-automatic barrages, that empty the cartridge

Post-traumatically scar kids that try to be brave

Because niggaz backstab each other just to try to get paid

Turn cannibal like nights during the crusades

Afraid of responsibility; addicted to greed

Beating their girls purposefully losing a seed

As if we were bound to the destiny we used to receive

[Hook]

I used to wonder (I used to wonder) about people who don't believe in themselves

But then I saw the way that they portrayed us to everyone else

That cursed us, then only see the worst in ourselves blind to the fact the whole time we were hurting
ourselves

I used to wonder (I used to wonder) about people who
don't believe in themselves
But then I saw the way that they portrayed us to
everyone else
That cursed us, then only see the worst in ourselves
blind to the fact the whole time we were hurting
ourselves

I used to wonder {echo}
