And your eyes once so kind, now they never meet
mine;
And just stares like a cold winter's night.
When you kissed me good-bye, I could taste ev'ry lie.
And I don't have to ask myself why.
It's as clear as the October sky.
And your words once so sweet, now they fall
incomplete;
And they're no longer speaking to me.
When will I shed my grief for a moments relief,
And pretend these aren't tears in my eyes.
I'm as blue as the October sky.
Now I feel like such a fool, 'cause my love's been over-
ruled.
So, I'll have to plead my case to the moon. What more can I do?
When your touch has gone cold like the first hint of snow,
And your emotions seem frozen inside.
They're as cold as the October sky.
(Musical interlude)
Now I feel like such a fool, 'cause my love's been over-
ruled.
So, I'll have to plead my case to the moon. Oh, what can I do?
When you kissed me good-bye, I could taste ev'ry lie.
There's a hole in my heart a thousand miles wide.
It's as deep as the October sky.
(Musical interlude)
I'm so blue...
