"Window"

ebony-mouth
still carved in yellowed glass while her features run
painted - vitrified
the truth I laid it down in her lap fragile present
filled up every view
of emptiness

and
the windows cried
as she walked across the halls left back decayed the windows cried sight is failing weakened he turns away

silhouette
I can't erase the lines ... her lines though I know I could always recall it on my mind from the outside
the voices gently swing
announcing days
out of sight

out of sight
