All alone in this world you bend the light to make due Saving all your shiny pennies sometimes wishes do come True
You stay when you should run tugging thread through a Seam You'll be ready when they come in the season of dreams
In the medicine cabinet remedies to dull the pain Forty five's and misplaced letters, party dresses do the Same
Mixing colors on the glass changes every thing you've

Seen
You'll be ready when they come, in the season of
dreams
Take the keys from the dash board, this city knows your Name
Pushing metal on the pavement Grinding gears in the rain
You stay you should run tugging thread through a seam
You'll be ready when they come in the season of dreams
