I admit that I am a fish
Like the rest of us swimming
In the lake of life.
I see all this other fishes
Trying to flow with the mass
Because they feel protected or something
The danger is inside the mass!
They are full of colors but they rarely notice.
They try to flow up and down
With each other like zombies
Without even knowing why!
It's like an unwritten rule
They have to follow that makes
Them all the same.
And if they are not the same
They struggle and fight to copy each other.
If everyone is his self,
Then we'd all be abnormal
And strange to everyone else.
This "fishes" try to write unwritten rules
About normality.
I tried to fake it...
To pretend that inside my head
I was living with their rules
And I was thinking their thoughts...
But it wasn't true.
There was a whole new world
Inside my heart and my head,
Exploding to break out.
A world, full of passions
And energy for which you
Must fight for.
Believing that what you
Think it's real.

It really is.
Make it visible to the other eyes.
And when you climb
The watery mountain of humanity,
All will adore you.
Because it's them who are living your world now
It was them that when you were
Climbing tried to pull you down several times.
But they couldn't... You defeated them...
And now your world is free
The unwritten rules have changed!
Make your choice and show the world
The exploding world you hide in your heart.
