MITCH:

lungs face like wax and a solid heart expressions freezed, eyes fixed downwards i've seen you in this state before your wasted life as the touch, your fingertip looses mine you looked like staying that way, for the rest of your life

CHEWISH:

i stumble over cobblestones blindmen murmur as they pass sticks breaking the air as they force themselves forward in the morning mist, your lifeless just like them, the livestock that break their way forward, you lost your way and now look at you, emotionless and stranded fools spoke on the spot as the gatekeeper passes the moment locked away in his own world he hasn't seen you in the same light as me the light which is now lost i crouch down and feel the sodden earth in between my fingers a bracing throwback to the ground which is now falling away
the blind man can see now just as well as you and me..
..etc..

MITCH:

the, blind, man, can
THE BLIND MAN CAN SEE JUST AS WELL AS ME
