In the morning she woke up
To this emptiness inside
Every color toned in white
With an outline drawn in pain

You wore me down
You wore me out
Through the chasing of your heart
You had me believe
You had me blind

In these pages words read fake
It's all been said it's all been done
There's nothing left that she would hear
The fall was deep yet she had no fear

You wore me down
You wore me out
Through the hating of your heart
You had me believe you had me blind

So fast to move on
But all around her
Were things she left behind
There's only an empty stare
When you ask her
Are you happy with things now
You made it clear
With words you spoke through tears
So far away

You wore me down
You wore me out
Through the hating of your heart
You had me believe you had me blind
If you had it all over to do again would you change it
If I had it all over to do again I'd try

You wore me down
You wore me out
Through the hating of your heart

You made me believe you made me blind
