This old house turned cold when he walked in
Oh, and I felt myself fading as you smiled at him
Now lately, I'm just barely hanging on:
A shadow of the man you loved, forgotten but not gone.

Forgotten, like a fool that time passed by
But the day that I let go, I know I'll die
Unwanted man, a ghost in my own home...
That's how it feels to be forgotten, but not gone.

Every night, these two arms reach out for you
Oh, but you just can't feel their touch the way you used to
I guess no heart can hold two loves for too long One staked his claim, now one remains forgotten but not gone.

Forgotten, like a fool that time passed by
I can see my whole life passing in your eyes
And the epitaph carved in your heart of stone:
Here Lies A True Love, Forgotten But Not Gone.
