"Stake Our Claim Again"

Rural route 2 box 554c the home of my family's farm it's still home to me it's where I want to raise my kids but it don't look Like I can cause every time you turn your head they're breakin new ground again it started bout 8 yrs ago with that one house Up on the hill 40 more the next six yrs in Erbockers of corn field the city's finally movin out and the country's moved away There's nothin we can do about it I wonder why we even stay Well should we cash the farm on in and just move on down the line or stand our ground and fight til the end to buy us a Little more time we all know it's comin but we don't know when we'll haveta pack up everything and stake our claim again
It doesn't make much sense to me what goes on in peoples heads a half a million dollar home on a quarter acre spread they cuss about the smell of the dairy right next door they're gonna push all the farmers out of that you can be sure
So should we cash the farm on in and just move on down the line or *stand our ground and fight til the
end* to buy us a
know when we'll haveta pack up everything and stake
our claim again
So should we cash the farm on in and just move on
down the line or *stand our ground and fight til the
end* to buy us a
know when we'll haveta pack up everything and stake
our claim again
Yeah we'll haveta pack up everything and stake our claim again

They sing two versions of this song and where they say "stand our ground and fight til the end" it could also be
"tell em

All to go to h" and where they say "cuss" it could also be "b*" but I like the version without the bad language (just My opinion)
