If I had a wishlist,
Oh my god, I'd put you first.
Put my heart above my head
And leave you the rest my friend

If I had the strength I'd save you from the cold Build this house from off the ground so you'd never be alone

But I'll keep on walking
Until the ocean blocks my path
And hope that this uncertainty wont last
But you call out
That your love is lonely
Even though I was with you all the while

You thought my heart was made of stone
You thought my heart was made of stone
You thought my heart was made of stone
The truth is that I'm tired of feeling alone

I know it's not right, to say.
That maybe I'm afraid of grace
It's the feeling, the flutter
The pull of the gutter that calls
It's the shade of anger as I keep on running towards home
It's the sense of relief,
As you leave me to sleep on my own
Oh My God, forgive me for who I'm not.

You thought my heart was made of stone
You thought my heart was made of stone
You thought my heart was made of stone
The truth is that I'm tired of feeling alone
