There are a few things I should say
Oh, before I make my way
Down the hall and out the door
That we've walked so many times before
When my battery is low and I'm getting cold
I need to recharge, need to kickstart oh

Fool thinking you could make a man out of me
That you keep me clean

But if only I could say this
Maybe she would finally face it
Maybe she would finally understand.

The plug in the wall,
It won't fit at all
To turn me back on
Make me come undone
I open up and say what I, I really mean
This is all you see.

But if only I could say this
Maybe she would finally face it
Maybe she would finally understand

Don't want to tell you, but a year ago this was over (this was over)
It's difficult just to walk away and leave forever (leave forever)
And I've tried it again, and again
But I just need to give up, give up
Let go and start this over.
It's such a shame I never felt that way

Maybe she would finally understand.
Maybe she would finally understand.
Maybe she would finally understand.

Maybe she would finally face it.
But if only I could change it.
Maybe she would finally face it.

Don't want to tell you, but a year ago this was over. (this was over)
It's difficult just to walk away and leave forever (leave forever)
And I've tried it again, and again
But I just need to give up, give up
Let go and start this over.
It's such a shame I never felt that way.
