high moon, old mountain headlights are hurting my eyes i must be tired
road after road after road

i am aching
it happened
somebody died i love
road after road after road
i don't know where you are

time might take it make it into something you say a fact
road after road after road

i looked into your drawer of hankies a chair with nobody there a hat
i don't know where i am

these roads that wind around are losing me losing i drove out of your town losing you losing back into my home
a city insignificant speck of dust

how come i don't feel i'm living
my heart beat and it broke so i must be
road after road after road
