(Roch Voisine)

It's four a.m.

And the wind's kind of hard today

But they'll go out anyway

Against the deck the waves are hitting

Strong, the wives will have to pay

The daring ones will sail out to sea

Risking their lives

Brave and free

And through the storm

Their faith will keep them strong

And bring them back where they belong

Home free

The channel rumbles and groans

To the frail boats

That dare to leave the coast

So many died down the road

Down the road of time

Leaving nothing but tears behind

The daring ones will sail out to sea

Risking their lives

Brave and free

And through the storm

Their faith will keep them strong

And bring them back where they belong

Home free

Far on the site

The men will work and pray

For the catch of the day

Piling the traps, pulling the ropes

A flock of seagulls

Break the peace of the newborn day

Hours later the "cages"

Are packed on the deck

There goes the working day

Packing the trucks

Back on the road

Back to Point-Sapin

There goes the fishing day

The daring ones will sail out to sea

Risking their lives

Brave and free
And through the storm
Their faith will keep them strong
And bring them back where they belong
