I woke up this morning and the world was on my mind...

Got nowhere to go, got no place to be,
And there's no monkey on my back that's eating me.
So I'm taking five as far as I can roam,
And if I close my eyes the world becomes my home,
When I step outside, when I chase the wind,
And I'm feeling fine, I'm feeling fine.

Now all the world's my home and anywhere's my block,
I swim up any river and I climb up any rock.
From the mighty northern Pole to the deep blue
Tennessee,
Via Paris France - the fun is always free,
When I close my eyes, when I chase the wind,
And I'm feeling fine, I'm feeling fine.
When I step outside, when I taste the wind,
And I'm feeling fine, I'm feeling fine.

Close your eyes, pick a place,
Maybe in the ocean, or maybe on the driest land,
Now begin your journey with the world at your command
