Unconventionally a believer In the power of your fellow kind But when your pockets fill to overflowing You can use it better than they can There's something that you do believe in There's nothing anyone should need But your philosophy is ever changing It's the backbone of your greed Aesthetic anarchist Your people await Aesthetic anarchist You can't be late So park your conscience where you ego shines Aesthetic anarchist With your gold tooth smile You tell them what they want to hear now Using language from the street Appealing to the lowest emotion Making promises you can't keep
