Sometimes we're singing and the words won't rhyme
Cause we don't mean these things we sing
I'll still be waiting for another day
When you feel it too, but it's a game we play

And I've tried to tell you for a long, long time
That games aren't played where love is made
And I grow so weary of this masquerade
I'd like to hide my head and slip away
From this never ending game that we play

It's a never ending game
Going round and round, round and round and round

Sometimes I'll see you with a blind man's eyes
They never borrow or repay
And I never speak it in the light of day
But don't you feel it too in the game we play

And it's a never ending game
Going round and round, round and round
And round round and round (repeated to fade)
