"Heroine"

Our kiss painfully drew open the curtains
I hid you inside my coat
Back then, we lived in different places
If this was a movie, we'd have a happy ending after 2 hours

Let me hold you now
Yesterday is gone, you'll never be alone again
The trees by the road rustled as birds took flight
I'm sure I knew we'd end up in the dark

A thin car's headlights on a rain soaked road
Shined on us briefly and then disappeared
The innermost table at that corner store's already taken
Our love can't be spoken about

I can't be as cool as those guys in the movies
But I want to protect you
Our story can't be told in 2 hours
I've finally met my heroine and it's you

Let me hold you now
Starting tomorrow, you'll never be alone again
We'll warm each other with casual words
You're my one and only heroine
