Storm at sea
Anticipation of daylight
Eyes open in an ocean of lightless night
Ears keen to the sounds
The unusual surrounds

Daylight come again
Make us want to live

Held beneath the velvet skies
This reluctant ship finds
Howling in cacophony
The mistress of the sea

Waves crash against, breaking high
The surge of light sets the sails on fire
Speechless in sleepless dreams
The creatures of our own conceived
Surface attack from the deep
The boiling waters roar

Daylight come again
Make us want to live

Into waves the sky descends
Forlorn hope against serpent sand
We must swim to live

Held beneath the velvet skies
This reluctant ship finds
Howling in cacophony
The mistress of the sea

Mayday! Mayday! Mayday!
Wreck stray and castaway
Our ship is sinking
And we're going under
Mayday! Mayday! Mayday!
Wreck stray and castaway
Into waves the sky descends
Forlorn hope against serpent sand

We must swim just to live
