(Bob McDill)

I was all alone and lost
Weren't too many rivers crossed
You said hello
And I was found
You turned me around
I was living in a shell
Had a wall around myself
You came along and broke it down
You love me somehow
But I got home today and found you were gone
Now nothing matters anymore

Funny how things work out
Can't believe somehow
You could leave me now
Tell me what were you thinking of
'Cause now that you taught me how
There's nobody here to love

I was living all alone
And though I had a heart of stone
You touched my hand in melting me
And I believe
If ever there was a giving kind
I guess I was a little blind
And it was you that made me see
What love could be
But I walked in today and no one was there
Now nothing matter after all

Funny how things work out
Can't believe somehow
You could leave me now
Tell me what were you thinking of
'Cause now that you taught me how
There's nobody here to love

Oh did you think of me
Or did I somehow slip your mind
And all I've learned from you

Was it just a waste of time

Funny how things work out
Can't believe somehow
You could leave me now
Tell me what were you thinking of
'Cause now that you taught me how
There's nobody here to love
