I fell asleep in a desert
And woke up by a stream
With dragonflies and rocks that bind
This world to my feet
And I said

I think that there's got to be more than one of me
'Cause these eyes straddle two realities

I sit on stones at the water's edge
And stare into the ripples of reflection
I want to know what it looks like
From the underside

And I think that there's got to be more than one of me
'Cause these eyes straddle two realities
They straddle two realities

What do you want from me?
Why can't I ever see?
What do you want from me?
Why can't I ever see?

And I think that there's got to be more than one of me
'Cause these eyes straddle two realities

I think that there's got to be more than one of me
'Cause these eyes straddle two realities
Oh they straddle two realities
They straddle two realities
