(Kenny Rogers - Kin Vassy)

I see the town where we were born I see the place we were raised

I see all the things you wanted that I never gave I see sadness I see sorrow I see pain on your face
But I just can't see a stranger in my place.

I can see where we quarreled I can see I was wrong
I can see where you might weaken when I wasn't strong I see mem'ries of a love gone bad that time cannot erase
But I just can't see a stranger in my place.

No one seems to know you quite like I do
No one knows the things that make you cry
And lookin' back it seems I never showed you
And now I lay alone and wonder why.

I can see where you might grow tired of dreams that don't come true
I can see where I have fallen short of things I promised you
I can see through my tear filled eyes no love on your face
I must get used to seein' strangers in my place...
