Swift as a wind song sang the music of an honest bird I waited for some contradiction truth was ringing in your every word and every moment since then the one thing I can say is that I belong with you and no one else

Lay down those heavy burdens on the banks of this river deep know that every piece of your past is always some place safe with me and there's no room for judgement I want you as yourself because I belong with you and no one else

We have both been broken bent into painful shapes

We almost let those old fears carry over and get in the way every struggle just makes our love get stronger than it was yesterday

So here we are now ain't it lucky we survived it all searching for self in seperate rivers only to end up in the same waterfall and when we're gray and wiser story I will tell is that I belong with you and no one, no one else, I belong I belong with you and no no no one and no one else
I belong with you and no one, no one else
