Like mountains standing strong and tough,
You are smooth where I am rough.
Proud like sculpture,
In my bedroom we're both digging in nails so hard.
Taste bittersweet, as we treat ourselves tonight,
Smiling graves are lined like teeth stood tight.
And we watch the sky run.
This is my last confession.

I was stone until I met you
(Stand strong through landslides).
Your hand in my hand, we're standing like statues.
We both know that we're to blame
(You make my earthquake).
There's a time and a place but not tonight.

Hard as a rock.

Together we explore these caves,
They might collapse but we are brave,
We turn to dust.
The summer sun will scorch and dry the ground,
In the shade of trees we make no sound.
And we watch the earth turn.
You are my last confession.

I was stone until I met you
(Stand strong through landslides).
Your hand in my hand, we're standing like statues.
We both know that we're to blame
(You make my earthquake).
There's a time and a place but not tonight.

I'd write letters to myself.

I was stone until I met you
(Stand strong through landslides).
Your hand in my hand, we're standing like statues.
We both know that we're to blame
(You make my earthquake).
There's a time and a place but not tonight.
