you built this house
you built it stone by stone hammer in your hand
you built this home

and this house is strong you raised it with your love a shelter from the wind from the cold and dark

and nobody has to cry
to make it seem real
nobody has to hide
the way that they feel
if you stay right here
tomorrow you will be fine
i will be here for you
standing by your side

so come home

come home

you built those walls to hide your fears inside we were young then its safe now to come outside

we built this home
on this little piece of land the sky above was dark no rain comes in

nobody has to cry

as the storm grows stronger, deeper and wide my faiths a winding river with no river side as the years grow longer i will be here by your side ashes to dust and stone by stone forever i will always be your love
