One, two, three, four
Whatever happened to the old me
Whatever happened to us
Whatever it was it doesn't matter now
Those days went speeding by
And left us in the dust
The car's on empty
It rattles and rusts

Whatever misses is permanent
A red wine stain or a scar
Like one of those if you flip the negative
Knew who I was, and even before
I even knew
Now just look who we are

And these wheels turn fast
These wheels turn bright
Reflecting every blurry moon that long goes shining
Shining through the dark of the night
Shining through the dark of the night

You know that house I don't want to buy
I want to buy it for you
The walls are made out of the wishes I make
When I close my eyes
And I'm lying here with you

Whatever misses is everything
My feet are sore and blue
Everything I ever said I did before
Was just to get me here
Get me here next to you

And these wheels turn fast
These wheels turn bright
Reflecting every moon that long goes shining
Shining through the dark of the night
These wheels turn fast
These wheels turn bright
Reflecting every moon that long goes shining

Shining through the dark of the night
Shining through the dark of the night
Shining through the dark of the night
Shining through the dark of the night

Shining through the dark of the night
