you and I we were born to play these parts and we play them so well so well and often sometimes you and I forget you know who we really are it keeps me locked into the deal

Binary stars, companions in the sky always in orbit but never to collide we're just not going supernova any time soon we're just two stars out under the moon Typecast, we play losers who keep falling in love with the wrong ones

Typecast, what a show, why won't they cancel us? we got a million more seasons to go oh no, oh yes, we've been typecast every shadow I knew you underneath was just a studio trick, a spotlight on the stage black bottles to simulate the depth to manipulate the young and naive and hide your age we're worse than liars we're paid to be fixed ghost lights in our living rooms for in-between matinées two lonely stars someplace beyond the moon where the light is coming from but never receiving or getting any

We're typecast, we play losers who keep falling in love with the wrong ones
Typecast, what a show, why won't they cancel us?
oh come on, typecast, we play losers who keep falling in love with the wrong ones Typecast, what a show, why won't they cancel us?
We've been typecast, yeah we've been typecast
