Yesterday the sun touched down. It dropped itself right outside my window, And I looked outside to see the sky was all around me. I looked out at all the world and finally found me. I started talking to the sun. We talked of birds and leaves and such And I thought; 'I know too much For writing down and filling pages Left empty by the prophets and the sages.' CHORUS Between the sunflowers and the rain There's me. So far along from where I came. There's me. I started writing songs with the sun. Songs without instruments. Songs without the old constraints of writing songs With pen and paper. The sun and I were sharp just like a saber. The music, it was beautiful. I looked out at the world I came from And saw that it was beautiful. The sun it, hovered lowly. And the time, the time was passing slowly. CHORUS BRIDGE And those who hadn't found their place started to burn. The sun just shook its head; 'They have got so much to learn.' Yesterday the sun touched down. It dropped itself right outside my window And I looked outside to see the sky was all around me. I looked out at all the world and finally found me. CHORUS
