Open your ears to Nature
The words are said to have a sense
The river's song from the water
A spirit's lament telling the Misfortune of the lonely
Wanderer who drowned there

Far in the moor lives a friar
As wizard as he's christian
He lights a flame with his finger
Reads in the planet and knows that Tales of the Wind can be Heard in the lost lands

Inside the woods lives a creature
A charming mermaid by the fountain
Her eyes are blue like the waters
Her look is fatal for the mortal
Who comes to pass by the Pool where she's swimming

Tales of the Wind, they will never be blown away.
