The sky's so perfect I could scream
As if I've not woken from this dream
I feel a terror seeping in
Something just beneath the skin
Everything feels wrong
Everything is wrong with me

The stars kept staring back at me
Hiding something I can't see
All these memories flooding back
Filling up the heart I lack
Everything is wrong
Everything feels wrong with me

Such familiar horizon
Comforts me as it always has
A pale glow shall soon wash over
Leading to the home I never had
Everything feels wrong
Everything is wrong with me

A world devoid of inspiration
And I have never felt so weak
I seem to see myself as a failure
The old mirror so oblique
And yet I breathe each day
And yet I breathe each day
As if to prove I am alive

A simple mark of desperation
As I throw my mind away
A fleeting spark of inspiration
Of the words I cannot say
Everything feels wrong
And everything is wrong with me
Everything feels wrong
Everything is wrong
Everything feels wrong
Everything is wrong with me.
