Another starry night is above us
For the last ten thousand years
It's been the same

In a moment's notice
Not a stone unturned that someone didn't claim
Who am I to be here? Who am I to know?

All the streets are sinking
'Cause the world goes half the speed
Of what it takes

And the wires be somewhere
Sending signals to our homes from outer space
Who am I to know this? Who am I to breathe?

From the warmth of being fine
To defending battle lines

In a car on the freeway
Broken down from some new form of gasoline
In the door she's waiting
Living up to every diamond in that ring

Who am I to love you?
Who am I to care?

Another starry night is above us
For the last ten thousand years
It's been the same

In a moment's notice
Not a stone unturned that someone didn't claim
Who am I to be here? Who am I to know?

Who am I to love you?
Who am I to care

Who am I?
(From the warmth of being fine)
Who am I?
(From the warmth of being fine)

Who am I?
(From the warmth of being fine)
